Question No.1

(CLO No. 1)

Marks: 9

Q 1: Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

Unlike other classes I have taken, here there was no sense of competition. When the teacher poked a shy Korean woman in the eyelid with a freshly sharpened pencil, we took no comfort in the fact that, unlike Hyeyoon Cho, we all knew the irregular past tense of the verb "to defeat." In all fairness, the teacher hadn't meant to hurt the woman, but neither did she spend much time apologizing, saying only, "Well, you should have been paying more attention." Over time, it became impossible to believe that any of us would ever improve. Fall arrived, and it rained every day. It was mid-October when the teacher singled me out, saying, "Every day spent with you is like having a tooth extracted." And it struck me that, for the first time since arriving in France, I could understand every word that someone was saying. Understanding doesn't mean that you can suddenly speak the language. Far from it. It's a small step, nothing more, yet its rewards are heady and misleading. The teacher continued her criticism, and I settled back, bathing in the subtle beauty of each new curse and insult. "You exhaust me with your foolishness and reward my efforts with nothing but pain, do you understand me?" Me Talk Pretty One Day by David Sedaris

1. Identify the Tone of the author and justify your answer by giving one example from the passage. [2 Marks]
2. What is the style of the author? Justify your answer by giving one example from the passage. [2 Marks]
3. What is the implied main idea of the passage? Write down two major supporting details. [5 Marks]

Question No.2

(CLO No. 2)

Marks: 6

Q 2: Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

Last week I was stuck inside because of a sudden heatwave, and it made me realize how much our weather has changed. Summers don't feel like summers anymore—they feel like survival tests. The truth is, climate change is real, and it's happening right now in ways we can all see and feel. Just look around: floods are washing away villages, wildfires are destroying forests, and cities are boiling in record-breaking temperatures. Some people still argue it's a "future problem," but honestly, that's like ignoring smoke in your kitchen while the fire spreads. The scary part is that a lot of this comes from our everyday habits—burning fuel, wasting electricity, and using way too much plastic. But here's the hopeful side: if each of us makes small changes, like saving energy, recycling, or choosing public transport, we can slow down the damage. It's not about being perfect—it's about being better, step by step.

1. Identify author's purpose and justify your answer by giving an example from the passage. [2 Marks]
2. What is the stated main idea of the passage? Write down two major supporting details. [2 Marks]
3. Identify the dominant pattern of organization and justify your answer by giving two supporting details. [2 Marks]

Question No.3

(CLO No. 3)

Marks: 10

Q 3: Rewrite the following paragraph so that it follows a Cause-and-Effect pattern of organization. Keep the same main idea, but you may rearrange or rephrase the sentences. Be sure to use clear cause-and-effect transitions (such as because, therefore, as a result, consequently) to show the relationships between ideas.

Paragraph (Chronological Pattern)

In the early 1990s, computers were still a rare sight in many households, often reserved for offices or wealthy families. Internet connections were slow, relying on noisy dial-up modems that limited people to simple emails and basic web browsing. By the late 1990s, however, personal computers became more affordable, and schools began introducing computer labs to prepare students for the digital age. Entering the 2000s, the launch of faster broadband connections changed everything. Suddenly, downloading files, watching videos, and connecting with friends online became much easier. Social media platforms emerged during this period, transforming how people communicated and shared their lives. In the 2010s, the rise of smartphones made technology even more personal, allowing users to carry the internet in their pockets. Apps for banking, learning, and shopping became part of daily life. Today, technology has reached a stage where artificial intelligence and automation are beginning to reshape industries, from healthcare to transportation. Looking back, the journey of technology clearly shows how each decade built upon the last, moving from slow, bulky machines to fast, portable, and intelligent systems that continue to redefine modern living.
