CLO1: Should be able to explain and apply the introductory concepts of management

Q2: Three months ago, Imran (a fintech product manager) decided to launch a new digital lending feature despite his team's concerns about incomplete market research. The feature has now failed, only 200 users signed up against a target of 5,000, and the company lost PKR 8 million. Imran tells his CEO: "The failure was because of poor execution by the development team. My strategy was sound." Privately, Imran's colleagues note that he ignored their warnings and rushed the launch.

Question: Identify at least three decision-making biases or errors Imran is demonstrating. Explain each one with reference to the scenario. (10 Marks)

Q3: Hassan has just been hired as the new HR manager at a textile factory in Punjab. During his first week, he notices:

- Factory workers (all men) call the line supervisor "Ustad ji" and never question his decisions
- Female office staff sit in a separate area and are not included in team meetings. Their concerns often remain unheard.
- The supervisors expect workers to work cautiously and ensure precision so that errors are minimized.
- Workers usually complete their tasks individually without input from their coworkers. Individual employees receive rewards based on their output.

- Senior managers park in designated "VIP" spots right next to the entrance, while workers park 500 meters away
- Recently, the plant manager proposed the automation of some operations in the plant. The top management rejected the idea.
- When Hassan asked why things are done this way, a senior manager told him: "This is how we've always done things here. Our workers respect hierarchy."

Question: Analyze this factory's organizational culture using dimensions of culture. Which of these dimensions are most prominent here? Explain each dimension in detail. [15 Marks]
