Reasons

WHAT CAUSES OVERTHINKING?

Anxiety

People with anxiety tend to ruminate on their thoughts and worry excessively, which can lead to overthinking.

Perfectionism

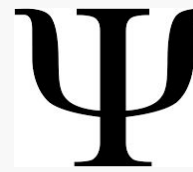

Perfectionists often have high standards for themselves and can be overly critical of their work.

Negative Self-talk

Negative self-talk can also contribute to overthinking.

WHAT CAUSES OVERTHINKING?

Trauma

People who have experienced trauma may also overthink as a way to cope with their experiences.

Lack Of Control

People who feel like they don't have control over their lives may also overthink as a way to try to regain control.

Fear of Unknown

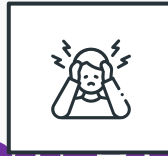

People may worry about what might happen in the future and try to prepare for every possible scenario, even if it's unlikely.

WHAT CAUSES OVERTHINKING?

Lack of Confidence

People who lack confidence in themselves or their abilities may overthink as a way to compensate.

Procrastination

If someone puts off a task, they may start to worry about how they'll get it done, leading to a cycle of overthinking.

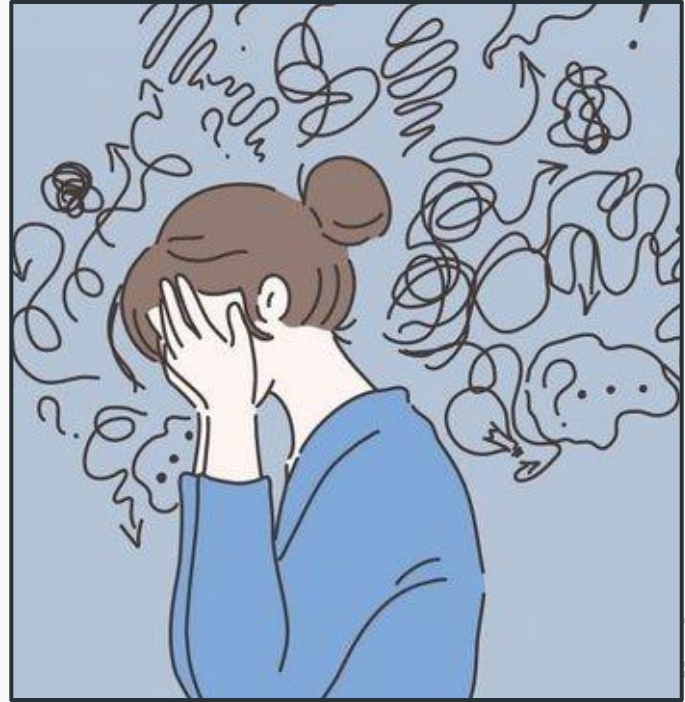

Overstimulation

In today's world, we're often bombarded with information and stimulation. This can lead to overthinking as our brains try to process all of the input.

Identify Negative
Thoughts

Recognize the automatic, irrational thoughts that contribute to your overthinking.

Challenge
Distortions

Examine the evidence for and against your negative thoughts and reframe them in a more realistic way.

Develop Coping
Strategies

Learn practical techniques to manage your thoughts and emotions, such as deep breathing or thought-stopping exercises.

Our brains are hardwired for the negative. These thoughts may be normal, but they're not always true or helpful. You have the power to either accept them as fact, or question them to move on!

AUTOMATIC NEGATIVE THOUGHTS

Gratitude Practice

Gratitude Journal

Regularly writing down things you're thankful for can shift your mindset and reduce overthinking.

Verbal Appreciation

Expressing gratitude to others, either in person or through a thoughtful note, can also lead to a more positive outlook.

Gratitude Meditation

Incorporating gratitude into your mindfulness practice can deepen your appreciation for the present moment.
